Dear Dr. Lederberg:

Thank you for requesting a reprint of my recent paper on the effect of income on use of preventive care. Actually, our paths crossed once before. In 1976, while you were on the faculty at Stanford, you were the university representative at my oral exam. My dissertation was on the effect of life change on recovery from surgery (Dick Scott was my chairman). I thought you might enjoy seeing the obligatory "dissertation paper" published in the Journal of Health and Social Behavior. I have enclosed a copy.

I am enclosing two other papers in which you may have some interest: an earlier paper I wrote (with Jack Wheeler) on use of preventive care (in this case the swine flu vaccination program) and a paper attempting to apply the dynamics of environmental selection to the problems of regional physician supply and distribution.

I was sorry to see you leave Stanford, but I understand the desire to move on. I, myself, am moving to the School of Public Health at U.C. Berkeley this summer.

I hope you enjoy the papers.

Best wishes,

Thomas G. Rundall
